

Don't wait for the storm to pass... dance in the rain at Bunn Leisure!

March may not see the sunny Selsey in all its summer glory – but that doesn't matter when it comes to making the most of a family spring break on this stunning Sussex peninsula.

Five-star award-winning Bunn Leisure holiday park opens its doors for its new 2015 season on March 13th and kick-starts with spring breaks from as little as £144 for six people. This kind of value looks set to make out-of-season family breaks as popular as the adult short break boom of recent years.

Bunn Leisure, embracing the philosophy that "life isn't about riding the storm but learning to dance in the rain!", is offering family spring breaks with free entertainment passes as an affordable opportunity to escape and spend time together – whatever the weather and long before summer holiday fever kicks in.

The park on the Manhood Peninsula in West Sussex is made up of four villages including a touring park right on the coast at Selsey, each with its own identity and appeal. The villages all share the exceptional five-star facilities. This combination makes them a perfect option for low season breaks with children when the weather may not be too kind but there is still plenty of fun to be had for those looking for an escape to the seaside.

There's plenty to keep kids occupied with free activities such as arts and crafts, colour character meet and greets and sport activities. The state of the art arcades boast all of the latest interactive games and incorporate the traditional 2pm machines for miles of smiles, taking parents' right back to their childhood.

The free-of-charge 'Oasis' is a tropical leisure complex, complete with a 25-metre swimming pool and leisure pool with megasplash water slides and lazy river. It's perfect for serious swimming and lessons for children – and, most importantly, great fun for toddlers, teens and grown-ups alike.

In the evenings for those who want to venture out of their cosy, modern caravans, there are three entertainment venues delivering an annual £1.5 million entertainment programme – a largely family-friendly line-up which starts on March 13th and is totally free to guests. Acts lined up for the early 2015 programme include musical legends' The Stars of The Commitments on March 14, rhythm and blues group The Platters on March 21 and powerhouse diva Angie Brown on March 28.

The mile-long beach and nature reserve, right on your doorstep, is perfect for walking in wellies and to blow away the cobwebs. Then pop in and warm up in the parks ideally located pub, The Ocean Bar, which overlooks the beautiful beach right across the Solent to the Isle of Wight - A view which is as spectacular out of season as it is in the summer season sun.

The region is home to some of the UK's best attractions – from full-on family fun to challenging outdoor activities and intensive retail therapy.

The maritime city of Portsmouth is less than an hour away. Famed as the home of HMS Warrior, HMS Victory, the Mary Rose and Spinnaker Tower, it also has excellent shopping at the continental marina-style Gunwharf Quays and a Blue Reef Aquarium on the beach at Southsea.

Nearby are the rolling South Downs National Park and the historic city of Chichester as well as Goodwood racecourse and motor circuit and the Weald and Downland Open Air Museum for a trip out.

Pagham Harbour and the Arundel Wetland Centre are perfect for young children in the spring – with chicks, boat safaris, hunts for mini beasts and 'Tree Creepers', a giant scale bird feeder which allows children to swing from a big "lard" ball. They're all opportunities for an outdoor adventure to get colour in the cheeks after months of being holed up indoors.

Southampton, the Isle of Wight, the New Forest and cosmopolitan Brighton are slightly further afield but still well worth a visit and offer good days out options, especially for longer stays.

For pre-school families a mid-week break is exceptional value from £144 for six people for four nights. For those tied to school holidays, make the most of a weekend break – arrive Friday afternoon and leave Sunday evening – or even early on Monday if you bring your school uniform. A weekend break costs from £161 for a three-night stay.
